WHIG NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND, WILLIAM T. GOLDSBOROUGH OF DORCHESTER COUNTY.

The gallant Dan Drake's company [fifty of them] left to-day for Fort McHenry, on their way to the wars. A single mother and a wife stood by the cars, weeping profusely at the loss of a son and to the weepers! A large crowd saw off these gallant spirits, and long and loud cheers were sent up as the cars moved off. How different from yesterday's scene, when President Polk departed! Only one little boy tried to shout then, and his parent bade him hush, and not disturb the silence: but the President threw him a fip for his effort.

The President's reception in Baltimore yesterday, was attended by a stinted party display The Mayor congratulated him upon the brillian future destiny of the Republic; and Mr. Polk, ir reply, anticipated no little pleasure in handing over his trust to his worthy successor. Prophets these-Mr. Polk and Mr. Davies! A brilliant destiny does indeed await our country, with Zachary Taylor in the Presidential chair.

I hope, sir, to retire, leaving the administration o my country in the hands of a worthy successor. [President Polk's Baltimore Speech.

Your hopes, sir, will be realized, and your suc cessor will be indeed a worthy man-no less a man than Zuchary Taylor.

THE PRESIDENCY. THE BOSTON ATLAS AND THE NA-TIONAL WHIG.

We can assure our excellent cotemporary, the Boston Atlas, that it is not the opinions of politicians which the National Whig expresses. It was established, as we have already said, to express the opinions of the majority of the Whig party on all the question's now before the country, and to come before it, and to re flect those opinions when they could be ascertained, in the choice of a Whig citizen for the Presidency. There were a few politicians in this city and elsewhere, who, at the time tho't it unadvisable and premature for us to proclaim that the mass of the Whig party was in favor of making General Taylor the next President -But the National Whig was established to ex press the Whig voice, whenever it could be ascertained, and it could not wait to confer with politicians as to its duty. Having ascertained to its satisfaction that Taylor was, as early as the beginning of April last, the man of the Whig People's choice for the Presidency, we threw his banner to the breeze, but while we husband. May the absent one be speedily restored did so, we left the halvards in the hands of the great and powerful Whig party of the Union. When that party comes to speak, we shall cheerfully obey its voice and behests.

But the question between the National Whio and the Boston Atlas-at least, one of the questions-is, Have the Whig People declared for the old Thunderer of Buena Vista for the Presidency? The Atlas does not absolutely say they have not, but it is doubtful upon the subject. When we begin to doubt, the mind is already half inclined to the side upon which it entertains doubts. We think therefore, that the Atlas is really half convinced that Taylor is the choice of a majority of the Whig party. If such a result be the operation of little more than two months' observa tion and reflection, we have no fears for the future. The day is not far distant, in our opinion, when the Atlas will not fear to declare to be true, what, two months ago appeared to us to be the fact, and which every day and every hour's experience only strengthens,-Though our position is favorable for seeing and examining the workings of the whole public mind-not in the yellow light, as the Atlas thinks, of the politicians' atmosphere, but in the pure white of the sun light of the Whig popular intelligence, of which the Atlas is one of its brightest rays-the Atlas is surely not so deeply enveloped in the thick fogs of New England, as not to see the "Whigs of the country moving forward like one vast army to the support" of the old Hero for the Presiden. cy. Is the Atlas so far distant from the mid dle, western, and southern States that it can not hear the reverberations of the Whig popular voice in favor of Taylor? Surely not. The present position of the Atlas, upon this ques tion, compared with that which it occupied two months ago, proves that it has heard the voice of the Whigs, and that it acknowledges the influence and power of that voice. The Atlas is not ignorant that there are now two hundred and twenty-three Whig journals which have hoisted the flag of Taylor, and clothes. Mr. P. thanked the donor very kindly. twenty eight, which have declared themselves favorable to his election, though they have not formally placed his name at the heads of their

The Atlas is not ignorant, that there have been four hundred and eleven primary meetings of the Whigs, within the short space of ten weeks, in various sections of the Union. at which General Taylor has been enthusiasti cally nominated for the next Whig President. The Atlas is not unaware, that a large, if not the largest, number of the most influential Whig journals in the country are for Taylor: and that out of, say, a thousand of the leading nating convention is to be held the 1st Saturday in Whigs of the Union, more than two thirds are decidedly of opinion that no earthly power can prevent the elevation of Taylor to the Presidency. The Atlas does not fail to see that Taylor has the hearts of the people-nay, if it catechised its own heart, rigidly, we believe it would find that it beats this moment as warmly in favor of the Old Hero as any other heart in the Union. The Atlas has not shut its eyes to the fact, the important, significant fact, that General Taylor is an object of dire hatred to the men in power, and that he has been, ever since the people manifested a desire to make him President, and is now, persecuted by the Administration in the most unheard of manner, in the most unparalleled ways. Surely, these tokens of public feeling, of the public will are sufficient to open the eyes of any man who does not absolutely refuse to let the light shine upon them, and we have no reason to rank the Atlas among those journals whose prejudices "eat up their houses." The Atlas knows that the genus irascibile of editors is not prone to do things long which are against its interests, and there is no pursuit in the world which sooner comes to know, whether its acts and steps are profitable or not. Knowing this fact, the Atlas must surely see, in the continued increase of Taylor Whig journals, and their growing and flourishing condition, proofs of the most solid and enduring nature of the depth of the love which the people feel for the Hero of Monterey.

> In March last, when the National Whig was established, it was designed to abstain from declaring in favor of any Presidential candidate previous to the action of a convention, for the simple reason that there was no predominant feeling in the Whig party in favor of any one man, then spoken of for the Presidency : but in the lapse of a few weeks be- the three million bribery fund, left, not as confitween the issue of the specimen number and the regular edition, evidences enough to our mind had peace could be purchased from the Mexicans as on the premises. Situated in a healthly location near Mr. Mechen on Maryland avenue. isfy us, that Taylor had carried captive the heart of RUPTURE BETWEEN SCOTT AND TRIST. lieving, without consulting with flesh or blood, we to the con rol of the party in convention assembled, if indeed it should be necessary to convene one, which time a'one will show. Our anticipations have been left entirely out of sight by the reality. We speak no doubtful thing, but sober real trath, and if the Atlas will unfold the talismanic flag of Monterey and Buena Vista it would not be many nours in realizing even in New England, whose heart is ever in the right place, if its pulsations are not restrained, that ZACHARY TAYLOR commands the affections and votes of the strong minded Whig nen of the North

Scott and the Clerk of the State Department, Mr. Trist. who has been sent here as a sort of Generalissi of the American army. This is the same Mr. Trist. if I err not, who imparted to Charles J. Ingersoll the knowledge of the existence of private and confidential papers in the State Department, during the absence of Mr. Secretary Buchanan, and who found out a way by which Mr. Ingersoll unconstitutionally got access to them, which enabled him to make his groundless and puerile attack upon Mr. Webster; and the same Trist who, when Consul at the Havana a few years ago, was charged on the floor of Congress by Mr. Adams with being secretly engaged in the slave-trade, and which charge was never cleared up. A pretty representative of a great nation, at a foreign court, to be are. A man who, for the basest, meanest party purposes, violates the confidence reposed in him by his superior, and tramples with impunity upon the constitution of his country.

This Mr. Trist, in the exercise of his mongre plenary civil and military powers, addressed a letter to Gen. Scott, directing him as to what move he must make with his troops. A portion of thos directions were such as Gen. Scott believed were at war with the best interests of our Government, and the tendency of which would be the protraction, rather than a termination of hostilities. It was the correspondence growing out of this difference of opinion that was the immediate result of this rupture. Copies of all the correspondence, I learn, has been transmitted by General Scott to the War Department.
